Monthly Commentary

During the month of February, markets abandoned the recurring concerns about inflation and the Federal Reserve’s future rate trajectory. This second month of the year echoed January’s positive momentum with the S&P 500 TR index finishing the month up 5.34%. In this context, it is interesting to highlight – again – the strong outperformance of the large capitalization stocks vs. the small capitalization stocks. As an example, the S&P 500 Top 50 was up 6.38% vs. the S&P 600 Small Cap Index that only rose 3.32%.

With continued interest in the key technology themes (semi-conductors, artificial intelligence) and generally better than expected Q4 earnings, most of the Magnificent 7 companies continued to show strength. The rally also began to broaden, with mid caps slightly outperforming their large-cap counterparts, with the S&P Mid Cap 400 up 5.94%.

All sectors posted gains, led by Consumer Discretionary up 8.71%, Industrials up 7.23%, and Material up 6.46%, all reflecting the overall strong economic and earning data released during the month. On the other hand, Real Estate, Consumer Staples, and Utilities were among the poor performers, down 2.58%, 2.32%, and 1.12% respectively. These three sectors lagged because the markets now expect delays in rate cuts, and as these sectors are rate-sensitive, they were excluded from the overall rally.

The GBI - Good Governance UCITS C Share Class (USD) was up 6.08% in January. It outperformed the S&P 500 TR index by 0.73%. This over performance can be attributed to stock selection, with notable contributions from NVIDIA, Eli Lilly, and Amazon, among others. Additionally, the Fund maintained a low allocation to the abovementioned sectors that lagged the index.

As highlighted in our previous reports, the fund has maintained a top-quartile ESG rating for the fourth consecutive year from Impact Cubed, an independent ESG rating company. For a comprehensive breakdown of our portfolio’s exposure to Executive Pay, please refer to page 2.

ESG Commentary on the portfolio and Portfolio Impact Measures

Impact Cubed conducted its annual review of the Good Governance model portfolio (excluding cash) used for the last April rebalancing. The detailed report is available upon request.

The portfolio of 100 stocks composing the GBI – Good Governance Fund exhibits strong scores on 14 metrics representative of the overall industries efforts in the ESG space. These results allowed our portfolio to be given a top-quartile rating by Impact Cubed in terms of ESG overall quality. The portfolio universe against which our portfolio is compared is a diversified sample of ESG and mainstream portfolios, covering all types of geographies, market caps and other characteristics, all analyzed against their own benchmark. Impact Cubed updates the universe periodically with new results. As shown in the chart below, the environment measures of the portfolio are significantly above the Benchmark, which tends to confirm our thesis that a good governance triggers good environment and social measures.

Focusing on the measure of Executive Pay calculated by Impact Cubed, our portfolio outperforms its benchmark, with an estimated 136.4 ratio of executive level pay to average employee pay vs. 138.6 for the benchmark. This is in the scope of the SDG goals for reduced inequalities (SDG 10). In our portfolio, the most ‘equal’ company is Lam Research Corporation and the least ‘equal’ is United Parcel Service Inc.
