Monthly Commentary

May 2026 was marked by a continuation of the strong recovery in U.S. equity markets, with the S&P 500 EUR Hedged TR gaining 5.15% over the month. Market performance was supported by continued optimism surrounding artificial intelligence-related investment, resilient corporate earnings, and easing concerns around geopolitical tensions and inflation. Investor sentiment remained constructive as the Q1 earnings season concluded with results broadly exceeding expectations, particularly among large-cap technology and semiconductor companies. The market was further supported by stable economic data and expectations that the Federal Reserve would maintain a measured approach to monetary policy, providing a favorable backdrop for risk assets.

The advance was more concentrated than in April, with large-cap stocks continuing to outperform smaller companies. The S&P MidCap 400 and S&P SmallCap 600 rose 2.45% and 1.04%, respectively. At the sector level, Information Technology was the clear leader, advancing 15.99% and extending its strong year-to-date performance, driven by continued strength in semiconductor and artificial intelligence-related companies. Consumer Discretionary and Health Care also posted positive returns of 2.61% and 2.48%, respectively. Conversely, more defensive and cyclical sectors lagged during the month, with Energy, Utilities, and Consumer Staples declining 5.56%, 5.14%, and 3.17%, respectively, as investors favored growth-oriented sectors amid improving risk appetite.

The GBI – Good Governance UCITS Class A was up 8.52% in May, outperforming the S&P 500 EUR Hedged TR by 3.37%. This strong monthly outperformance was primarily driven by the fund's overweight exposure to Information Technology, which significantly outperformed the broader market during the period. In particular, the fund benefited from its exposure to semiconductor and artificial intelligence-related companies, which continued to generate strong earnings growth and attract investor capital. The fund's focus on high-quality growth companies and structural beneficiaries of digital transformation remained a key contributor to relative performance throughout the month.
